1 (Proceedings began at 9:32 a.m.)

2 THE CLERK: Civil Cause for Telephone Conference,
3 Docket No. 16-CV-6915, Janfeshan v. DHS, et al.

4 Will the parties please state your names for the 5 record.

6 MR. ISMAIL: This is Tarek Ismail with Ramzi Kassem
7 here for the plaintiff Mr. Janfeshan.

8 MR. SCHACHNER: Elliot Schachner, Assistant United 9 States Attorney for the defendants.

10 THE CLERK: The Honorable Lois Bloom presiding.

11 THE COURT: Good morning, Mr. Ismail. I'm sorry, 12 was it Mr. Kassem or Ms. Ahmad that's with you?

13 MR. ISMAIL: Mr. Kassem. Ms. Ahmad is out of the 14 country, Judge.

15 THE COURT: Good morning, Mr. Kassem.

16 MR. KASSEM: Good morning, Judge.

17 THE COURT: And good morning, Mr. Schachner. How is 18 everybody today?

19 MR. SCHACHNER: Good morning, Your Honor. Just 20 fine.

21 MR. ISMAIL: Great.

22 THE COURT: So here is where we are. I'm jumping 23 way ahead just to get to the meat of it. This is an initial 24 telephone conference in the new case 16-CV-6915 which relates 25 to the seizure and the anticipated search of Mr. Janfeshan's

1 cell phone which was detained pursuant to a lawful border
2 search when Mr. Janfeshan entered the United States through 3 JFK. The Government had agreed upon the filing of a request 4 for a preliminary injunction in the prior case, 16-CV-4324, to 5 not search this phone until this matter was resolved.

6           It was a bit of a convoluted procedural history.
7 The prior action which was resolved when Mr. Janfeshan entered 8 the United States after he was permitted to board the Air
9 Egypt flight through quite a lot of effort on the part of both 10 the plaintiff and the defendant. That case was resolved and 11 even though the motion regarding the search of the cell phone
12 was made in that case the District Judge, the Honorable Allyne 13 Ross, directed that that case be closed and that a new case be 14 filed which was filed under the 16-CV-6915 which has now been 15 referred as related to Judge Ross and myself, and Judge Ross 16 has referred any motion that would be made to my attention.
17 So that gets us to where we are today.

18           There are presently two motions pending on the 19 docket sheet. One is the motion for leave to proceed in forma 20 pauperis filed by Mr. Janfeshan and that is granted, and I'll 21 put that in the order that I will issue after today's 22 conference.

23           And the other is a motion to amend, correct or 24 supplement that the defendant requests that the Court issue an 25 order allowing CBP to conduct a search or in the alternative

1 to set a briefing schedule and hold a hearing on the matter.
2 I quite frankly think that we should solve this issue by 3 working through a way that they can search the phone and not 4 search the portions that are attorney-client privilege and 5 then we're done and that's not briefing and that's not 6 argument. It's clear to me that the border search is 7 permissible. The border search doctrine is an example of what 8 is known as an administrative or special needs exception to 9 the traditional threshold requirements of probable cause and 10 reasonable suspicion.

11 But I do believe that we can balance the need to 12 search against the invasion of the attorney-client privilege 13 which the search may entail and I don't need briefing and 14 motions. I need cooperation here.

15 So who wants to be heard, Mr. Ismail, Mr. Kassem, 16 because I have certain things I do want to say to you.

17 MR. ISMAIL: Sure. I'm happy to address that, 18 Judge, and thank you for the summary. I think that's -- we 19 track on that. So we filed an initial motion in the previous 20 case on -- in an emergency posture with respect to the 21 attorney-client privilege question, and we -- and we are glad 22 that the Government has held off on searching the phone and 23 Your Honor and Judge Ross ordered us to file a new complaint
24 in this motion and we did so on the 21st as Your Honor 25 indicated.

1           As we looked into our client's interest as we filed 2 that claim, and that's why it took us a little bit longer to 3 file the complaint than we would have liked. We found that in 4 order to protect our client's interest it was proper to file 5 it both with respect to the attorney-client privilege issue as 6 we had in the initial TRO and with respect to his Fourth 7 Amendment right that he not be -- that his phone not be 8 searched.

9           I understand, Your Honor, that the border search
10 doctrine does provide for additional leave for the Government 11 to do searches that it may otherwise not be able to do within 12 the United States. However, there is a significant amount of 13 case law which limits this type of search that the Government 14 can do at the border with respect to electronics. At this 15 point I mean in order to protect Mr. Janfeshan's interest it's 16 not just that we're asking that the attorney-client privilege 17 information be protected, we're also seeking that his phone be 18 protected from an invasive search that would then 19 potentially -- and we have no reason to believe anything would 20 be turned up that would implicate him but --

21           THE COURT: Mr. Ismail, what is your authority for 22 saying that you have the right once he presents himself at the 23 border with an electronic device to bring a preemptive motion?
24 What is your authority for that, sir?

25           MR. ISMAIL: Your Honor, beyond the -- there's no

1 authority in the Second Circuit on the question of electronic 2 boarder searchers. However --

3 THE COURT: Can I just say to you that there is a
4 case directly on point, Abidor --

5 MR. ISMAIL: I know --

6 THE COURT: -- versus Napolitano which you did not 7 cite. It's 990 F.Supp.2d 260, a Judge Korman case from 2013.

8 MR. ISMAIL: I'm aware of that case and I'm also 9 aware of United States v. Gibo which is a more recent case out 10 of the Eastern District which held that [inaudible] at the 11 border was not proper. Beyond that --

12 THE COURT: It was in a different setting. It was 13 in a U.S. v. Gibo which tells you a lot because again in 14 Abidor where the plaintiff was making the pitch that there 15 should be no search or that the regulations violated the 16 Fourth Amendment. Judge Korman dismissed that action. When 17 you're talking about in a criminal context for a different 18 posture there may be a way that you can make your argument but 19 right now you have a threatened injury, you have no real 20 injury and you do not have in my mind a way to get equitable 21 relief except by making an agreement with the Government that 22 the Government was prepared to enter into but there's been no 23 progress made because you've been in my mind getting the 24 benefit of the Government's agreement not to search the phone 25 until the matter is resolved in court and I am not going to

1 let this continue because, again, looking at the emails back
2 and forth between your team of people and Ms. Kelly you're 3 asking that CBP return the phone immediately without 4 conducting any search of its content. It's not happening.
5 You don't have the right to that.

6 MR. ISMAIL: Your Honor, if I may just supplement
7 the argument I was making. I'm aware of Abidor but there's 8 additional case law and there's also been Supreme Court 9 precedent that affects this case.

10 THE COURT: Tell me, what is the Supreme Court 11 precedent that you're pointing me to?

12 MR. ISMAIL: So, Your Honor, I'm --

13 THE COURT: It certainly was not in your papers, Mr.
14 Ismail.

15 MR. ISMAIL: Like I said, we are filing -- we intend 16 to file a motion --

17 THE COURT: Not without my approval you're not. You 18 already filed your motion in the other case, sir.

19 MR. ISMAIL: I understand, Judge, and that case I
20 think we've resolved. So we're in a new posture.

21 THE COURT: No, no, no. You filed your motion for 22 preliminary injunctive relief under the other docket number.
23 I am not letting this go on with motion practice just to 24 prolong that you have gotten the Government to accede to your 25 demand that they not do any search. It was a border search.

1 They would agree not to search any of the things that you're 2 going to say are governed by attorney-client privilege in this 3 specific instance but you're trying to fight against that and 4 I don't believe that there is a basis for you to say that they 5 have to return the phone without conducting any search of his 6 content. I don't believe that there is any authority for 7 that.

8 MR. ISMAIL: So, Your Honor, if I can point you to 9 the authority that I think governs here. I mean, first and 10 foremost, I understand that the posture is unique here because 11 it's not a criminal case and there is another case on this 12 question out of the District of Massachusetts, House v.
13 Napolitano, and I can give you the cite.

14 THE COURT: I've looked at -- but, again, Judge
15 Korman was very clear in his decision that there was no
16 standing to attack even as applied under the Fourth Amendment
17 the regulations of CBP.

18 MR. ISMAIL: Your Honor, I mean Abidor -- the judge
19 did determine that there was no standing but the judge's 20 ruling on the question of whether or not there was border
21 search authority there to search Mr. Abidor's phone doesn't 22 hold as even persuasive authority here because it wasn't -- it
23 doesn't -- it didn't address the issue once the standing issue 24 was resolved.

25 THE COURT: Excuse me, sir. Judge Korman had a very

1 long even if there was standing portion of this opinion. And 2 he basically said reasonable suspicion is a minimal threshold
3 standard for conducting a search, and I'll quote to you.

4 "Plaintiffs must be drinking the Kool-Aid if they think that a 5 reasonable suspicion threshold of this kind will enable them
6 to guarantee confidentiality to their sources." In that case 7 he was talking about a journalist or Mr. Abidor who was 8 conducting research.

9           He goes into quite an analysis even if he never 10 reached the merits because he found there was no standing and 11 he talked about the precautions plaintiff may choose to take 12 to mitigate the alleged harm associated with the possibility 13 of a border search and your client I understand brought his 14 phone in. He needed to contact counsel in case things went 15 wrong but he could have left his real phone with his wife
16 overseas and he could have brought a more streamlined phone 17 back into the country but he didn't.

18           So we're left with that the Government has the right
19 to conduct a border search and we have your claim that there 20 are attorney-client privileges on the -- attorney-client
21 privilege attached to communications on the phone and I am 22 prepared to try to narrow or cabin their search so that it
23 does not intrude on the attorney-client privileged 24 communications but that's what I'm prepared to do. I'm not 25 prepared to go on with motion practice for the next month so

1 that the Government is unable to search the phone. I am not 2 willing to do that, and I'm the judge that you need to 3 convince, Mr. Ismail.

4 So, again, I'm not setting a new schedule. CBP has 5 the right to search the electronic devices on people who 6 present themselves at the border, and if you want to get a 7 remedy for your client now is your time to start thinking
8 about a protocol so we can get the attorney-client information 9 on that phone segregated so that they will not open those 10 communications. That's what you have the chance to do.

11 MR. KASSEM: Your Honor, this is Ramzi Kassem, if I
12 may. In terms of discussing the attorney-client privilege 13 aspect of what is on the phone, we've already had some 14 exchanges with opposing counsel towards discussing some 15 concrete ideas hopefully next week [inaudible] some exchanges 16 [inaudible] essentially over email.

17 THE COURT: I'm sorry, Mr. Kassem. I didn't hear 18 the last part. There's been some exchange of?

19 MR. KASSEM: There's been some exchanges off docket.

20 THE COURT: Off docket. I'm sorry, I didn't hear 21 what the word was.

22 MR. KASSEM: Yes. Essentially we've been able to 23 have that conversation and we'll continue to have that 24 conversation. Hopefully we'll be talking -- we'll be 25 discussing specifics in that regard next week with Mr.

1 Schachner I believe.

2 To go back to the --

3 THE COURT: Why can't we discuss those things, Mr.
4 Kassem, now? I'm on the phone. I want this to be resolved.
5 I don't want it to be dragged out. I have looked into this 6 matter. So, again, I'm on the phone with you now. I see that 7 there are emails attached to the new -- to the old motion 8 which was filed again in 16-CV-4324. You've attached the 9 letters between counsel, Ms. Ahmad and Ms. Kelly, and I'm 10 specifically looking at Docket 10-2, Page 21 in 16-CV-4324, 11 which I think is the repeat of another email where Mr.
12 Janfeshan is not waiving the attorney-client privilege, 13 specifically his communications via email, what's up, signal,
14 text messaging are protected and you're saying even from a 15 filter team and you've named Naz Ahmad. I know who that is.
16 Who is Kelly Burnett? Who is Kelly Burnett?

17 MR. KASSEM: Your Honor, that is a representative of 18 one of the defendants. Kelly Burnett was one of our former 19 students who's on the legal team.

20 Your Honor, before we get into these --

21 THE COURT: No, no, no. I really want to get to 22 what I wanted to get accomplished here. I don't want this 23 dragging on.

24 MR. KASSEM: Your Honor -- respectfully, Your Honor, 25 if you would give us an opportunity to address some of the 1 points that you've raised we would appreciate it.

2 THE COURT: Go ahead.

3 MR. KASSEM: So, Your Honor, Abidor in our view -- 4 we've also looked into this in some depth. Abidor, in our 5 view, is dicta and is unpersuasive and there is authority that 6 Abidor did not recognize -- there's a distinction in the case 7 law between what is considered a manual search and what is 8 considered a forensic search, and we would be remiss, Your 9 Honor, as counsel for Mr. Janfeshan --

10 THE COURT: I'm with you. I am with you, Mr.
11 Kassem. I understand there is something different between a 12 manual search and a forensic search. I understand that.
13 Believe me, part of my --

14 MR. KASSEM: Your Honor, we --

15 THE COURT: Excuse me, sir. Part of my obligation
16 as a magistrate judge in this court is to oversee warrant
17 applications and arrest warrants. So I understand that there 18 are different standards that attach to different types of 19 applications and here we are only talking about a border 20 search and we are talking that there are differences between 21 the quick look and then creating imaging and looking fully 22 through either a laptop or a cell phone. I understand those 23 distinctions.

24 I would tell you, however, sir, be very careful in 25 this district to call Judge Korman's opinion dicta because I

1 can tell you he was the U.S. Attorney in the Eastern District.
2 He was the chief judge in this court. Judge Ross served under 3 him as a U.S. Attorney. I was hired when he was chief judge.
4 So he commands a lot of respect on these issues and he's a 5 very thoughtful intellectually capable jurist. So just to 6 waive Abidor away and say it's dicta is not going to persuade 7 me that it's dicta. That's an academic trick if anything.
8 You're a law professor. I'm in the court. I looked up 9 whether or not Abidor was still good law. It is.

10 MR. KASSEM: Your Honor, if I may. I mean Abidor
11 relies on the Ninth Circuit ruling in Kotterman and Judge
12 Korman cites this idea of a quick look versus a more extensive 13 forensic search but the court in Kotterman doesn't really 14 mention the term quick look once but the idea in Kotterman 15 really is to make a very substantive distinction between what 16 the manual search which is a search where someone is looking 17 through the phone sort of with their finger or whatever the 18 case may be or a more in depth forensic search in which a --

19 THE COURT: I'm so sorry, sir. I need to cut you 20 off because really what you don't address is more important 21 than what you're addressing.

22 MR. KASSEM: What's that, Your Honor?

23 THE COURT: You have brought a new case saying that 24 they don't have the right to search your client's phone and 25 they do. It's a border search. They have the right to search

1 the phone. If you want to make a claim for damages if they go
2 through things and you believe that they violated his rights,
3 I don't even think that you'd have a Bivens claim. I don't 4 think you have a declaratory judgment action. I don't really 5 see that you'd have a basis to bring this civil action.

6           So if you really want to talk about what the problem 7 is with your case I don't think that you'd have a claim under 8 civil rights free standing Fourth Amendment principles.
9 You're trying to ground it in a declaratory judgment. I don't 10 think that you have a case that you can bring against the 11 people you're naming as defendants. I do think that we have a 12 willingness here to work out a solution. What a beautiful
13 thing. We could work out a solution for your client. It 14 might not get you everything you want. They are still going 15 to do some search whether it's a full forensic analysis or 16 it's a quick look. That's not an issue for me.

17           For me the issue is your attorney-client privilege
18 and trying to maintain that attorney-client privilege and so I 19 would like to get back to what I had on my to-do list which 20 was who are the people that you've named here and does the 21 attorney-client privilege attach to each of the people you've 22 named here because I don't know all of them. I know who Mr.
23 Kassem is. I know who Ms. Ahmad is. I don't know if Tarek
24 Ismail is the same person I have now. Is that you, Mr.
25 Ismail?

1 MR. ISMAIL: Yes, Your Honor, that's me.

2 MR. KASSEM: Your Honor, I do want to -- I'm sorry
3 to be bringing it back to this point but I really do want to 4 clarify our position here. Our position is not that there
5 would be no search whatsoever. The case law dictates that 6 there would -- there is a distinction between a manual search 7 and a forensic search --

8 THE COURT: So let me ask the Government. Mr.
9 Schachner, do you know which type of search your client 10 intends to conduct?

11 MR. SCHACHNER: We intend to conduct a complete 12 search of the -- of what's in -- of what's on the phone
13 obviously subject to the attorney-client issue which I
14 understand is the only issue proper before the Court now.

15 THE COURT: Thank you.

16 MR. SCHACHNER: And we certainly believe we have the 17 right to do so, the authority to do so under the Abidor 18 decision.

19 THE COURT: So I do think, Mr. Ismail and Mr.
20 Kassem, that getting an agreement as to who is going to be 21 covered by the attorney-client privilege. So what I had 22 suggested which I suggested when I saw the parties back in 23 December was that you get a list from everybody who is an 24 attorney or who the attorney-client privilege would attach to, 25 you get the dates that the communications were made, the

1 emails. I don't care which type of communication it was,
2 whether it was email, what's up, signal, text. I don't care.
3 But you would know on your side when you communicated and when 4 he communicated and you would be able to insulate all of those 5 communications with the Government's consent and then you 6 would be able to move on and try to challenge this at some 7 other point or some other time.

8           Let me just, Mr. Ismail and Mr. Kassem, because I 9 did really read through all the papers and really think about 10 the arguments. Part of what I did hear you to say is so Mr.
11 Janfeshan made this choice to go to Yemen and this had a 12 number of consequences for himself and his family and that's 13 never going to change. That he decided to go to Yemen is 14 never going to change. So that's always going to be something 15 in his past.

16           What do you expect the Government to do about that?

17           MR. KASSEM: Well, Your Honor -- this is Ramzi
18 Kassem. Your Honor, I do want to highlight. You asked Mr.
19 Schachner whether they were going to conduct a manual or a 20 forensic search. We were really interested in the answer to 21 that question but I don't believe mr. Schachner answered the 22 question.

23           THE COURT: He did. He said full search. He said
24 full search which means a forensic search.

25           MR. KASSEM: So, Your Honor, we -- we have our

1 answer then. As far as Mr. Janfeshan travel to Yemen, 2 respectfully, Your Honor, every year there are tens of 3 thousands if not hundreds of thousands of Americans, including 4 Americans of Yemeni origin or Americans who have no ties to 5 Yemen who travel to Yemen. It is not unlawful --

6 THE COURT: Mr. Kassem, of course it's not unlawful 7 but there are consequences and the Government is looking at a 8 number of different things and it's clear --

9 MR. KASSEM: But, Your Honor --

10 THE COURT: -- an itinerary can be something that 11 they think is suggestive of wrongdoing. Whether or not it is 12 is a different question.

13 MR. KASSEM: Your Honor -- respectfully, Your Honor,
14 I believe that both you and I are speculating because at no 15 point in these proceedings did the Government ever say on the 16 record what the reason was --

17 THE COURT: They do not have to. It's a border
18 search. They do not have to have a basis. It is a border 19 search. He presented himself at the border. He had an 20 electronic device. They are allowed to search that device.

21 MR. KASSEM: Your Honor, we -- our view based on our 22 review of the jurisprudence is that for a forensic search they 23 do need to have a basis and we would like to frame that issue
24 for the Court now that it is clear that the Government intends 25 to conduct a forensic search.

1           THE COURT: Look, you have your choice here. You
2 have your choice here. Your choice is either to come up with 3 what you believe is the attorney-client list of communications 4 that they will agree not to open or you don't have to do that 5 but they're going to conduct their search and you'll be left 6 to writing your briefs and your motions after the search is 7 conducted.

8           MR. KASSEM: Your Honor, we --

9           THE COURT: That's what your choice is at this 10 point. If you want to argue that they don't have the right to 11 do a full forensic search of the phone I think you're in the 12 wrong ball park here. Your case was about whether or not 13 there was attorney-client privilege that attached to 14 communications on the phone and we were willing to do what we 15 could to get that information segregated, not searched, not 16 opened, eliminate that possibility for your client.

17           If what you think is going to happen is that I'm 18 going to hold off for another four months and not let the 19 Government search the phone because we're going to be briefing 20 the issue of full search versus quick search, that's not going 21 to happen. I don't care whether you call it forensic, full, 22 mirror image, it's not going to happen. This is not the 23 vehicle for that.

24           MR. KASSEM: Your Honor, if I may. If I may respond
25 or address some of the points you're raising, Your Honor. So

1 on the first point we were -- and I just want to make two 2 points here, Your Honor, if I may.

3 The first is that we were ordered to file a motion
4 in the new action which we are about to do. The second point 5 is that after the attorney-client dimension of all of this, we 6 are in conversation with the Government and we are trying to 7 figure out what might be mutually acceptable protocol.

8 We cannot in fairness to our client waive the other
9 issue. It is our duty to raise these issues --

10 THE COURT: What other issues? What other issues 11 are you talking about, the exhaustive forensic search of the 12 phone?

13 MR. KASSEM: That, Your Honor, the point that was 14 made earlier that while we do not contest the defendant's 15 authority to conduct their manual search at the border, we do
16 believe that our client is protected against a baseless
17 forensic search. So we can't simply waive that because it's 18 convenient for Mr. Schachner.

19 What we're envisioning, Your Honor, by the way, is a 20 two-week briefing schedule. We're not talking about four 21 months, Your Honor.

22 THE COURT: I'm sorry, sir. I believe that they 23 have the right to do the search of the phone and that they've 24 held off at this point from doing any search of the phone.
25 Again, you're even complaining that they kept the phone and

1 that your guy had to buy another phone. It was unbelievable 2 to me that --

3 MR. KASSEM: No, Your Honor, we --

4 THE COURT: Yes, that's in your papers that he was 5 put through such a hardship because the phone numbers that he 6 needed were on the phone and he didn't have a place to stay
7 and he had to pay money to get another phone. You're talking 8 about apples and oranges here.

9 MR. KASSEM: Your Honor, CBP's own policy recognizes 10 that for the agency to hold onto the device is a hardship.
11 We're not making --

12 THE COURT: But it was stayed because of your 13 request. It was stayed because of your request. So in trying 14 to uphold your client's rights you made an agreement with the 15 Government that they would not search the phone but you knew 16 that they were going to hold the phone while this was being 17 addressed.

18 MR. KASSEM: Your Honor, we have no -- we have no 19 problems with them holding the phone. If Mr. Schachner had 20 said that they were going to limit themselves to a permissible 21 manual search then we would have talked about what that 22 entailed and the issue would have been settled. If we're 23 talking about a forensic search then we need to brief that 24 issue, Your Honor. We can't simply waive it. We would not be 25 doing our duty --

1           THE COURT: That's fine but I am not going to make 2 the Government hold off on doing the search. You could brief 3 whatever you want on whatever schedule and we can set that but 4 this is a civil action. I do not believe that you have this 5 as your remedy to challenge the Government's doing the search.
6 If you believe that they violate your client's rights you can 7 bring whatever type of request for redress you believe is 8 appropriate but I don't believe that there's a basis for you 9 to enjoin the Government except on their consent which they 10 consented up until now because they thought that they would be 11 working out with you a protocol for not invading the attorney-12 client privilege.

13           But I tried to speak about who the people on the 14 list are and you keep wanting to argue about the difference 15 between the full search or forensic search and the manual or 16 the quick search, and I'm not prepared for you to hold off the 17 Government's --

18           MR. KASSEM: Your Honor --

19           THE COURT: -- border search based on your briefing 20 of what you believe the different standards are for those 21 types of searches. The Court does not get involved in the 22 border search because if the border is a different standard, 23 which everybody recognizes that it is, can you imagine how 24 many people would not want their privacy to be probed at the 25 border.

1           So I am not giving you a new avenue. I am telling 2 you we have the opportunity now, right here and now to limit 3 what they're going to look at.

4           MR. KASSEM: Your Honor, can I suggest a way forward 5 for --

6           THE COURT: Sure.

7           MR. KASSEM: So what I would respectfully propose, 8 Your Honor, is that as you suggested we can discuss with 9 opposing counsel how to cabin their search with respect to the 10 attorney-client privilege contents of the phone. We will only 11 do that reserving our rights to subsequently seek relief as to 12 what we believe is an impermissible forensic search of our 13 client's phone. As you suggested, Your Honor, we won't 14 purport to prevent the Government from moving forward with 15 their search as we discuss all of that but we will file our 16 motion afterwards as to what we continue to believe is an 17 impermissible forensic search of the phone, Your Honor. I 18 believe --

19           THE COURT: Again, sir, this is what I would say.
20 I'm not trying to string you along here. You were told to 21 file this new case because the old case was over. I 22 understand why it would have been better for your client to 23 keep the old case open and bootstrap this new claim onto that 24 case because that case even though the Government had never 25 answered at least it was already in play. Okay. So now you

1 have a complaint for declaratory and injunctive relief and 2 because you're a law professor, Mr. Kassem, Professor Kassem, 3 the jurisdiction that you're citing is 1331. So what is the 4 congressional act that gives rise to a claim for a declaratory 5 judgment and an injunction in the border search of an 6 electronic device?

7 MR. KASSEM: Your Honor, I'm not sure I'm following 8 at this point. What I've tried to say, Your Honor, is that --

9 THE COURT: I would like you to answer my question.
10 What is the jurisdiction for somebody to challenge -- you're 11 suing U.S. Customs and Border Protection, R. Gil Kerlikowske,
12 Commissioner of U.S. Custom and Border Protection, Department
13 of Homeland Security, Jeh Johnson, Secretary of U.S.
14 Department of Homeland Security. What is it that is the 15 basis, the arising under jurisdiction? I understand there's a 16 Fourth Amendment claim that you want to raise but what gives 17 the Court the jurisdiction to entertain this complaint for 18 declaratory and injunctive relief?

19 MR. ISMAIL: Your Honor, I would again point the 20 Court -- this is Tarek Ismail again. I would again point the 21 Court to the District of Massachusetts case, House v.
22 Napolitano where an individual's phone, camera, USB device -- 23 and that case was in the posture that we've now suggested 24 where the Government has had -- had done the search and the 25 suit was then brought after the phone hadn't been returned for 1 some time.

2 THE COURT: But, again, it's after the fact and it's 3 a First Amendment challenge and it was that the search took an 4 impermissible amount of time. So --

5 MR. ISMAIL: Your Honor, those -- that's not all
6 that was brought up there. It was a First Amendment
7 challenge. There were two Fourth Amendment claims in that 8 case both that the search had taken too long and that the 9 search was impermissible with respect to the invasiveness of 10 the search, and I would add that all of these cases are 11 happening before the recent Supreme Court case of California
12 v. Reilly which goes in depth. I understand that that's a 13 search incident to arrest and that that context is quite 14 different with respect to the interests that are being 15 protected by the Government.

16 But the Supreme Court does go in depth into the ways
17 in which electronics are simply different than containers.

18 THE COURT: I'm so sorry, sir. Again, I am the one
19 who gets warrant applications on a regular basis. So I do 20 understand that the context matters and that arguing that 21 California v. Reilly means that you have a good faith claim 22 for declaratory and injunctive relief for your client under 23 these circumstances again, every person who's stopped at the 24 border would then have a good faith basis for declaratory and 25 injunctive relief if they didn't want their phone or laptop to

1 be searched whether it's --

2 MR. ISMAIL: Your Honor --

3 THE COURT: -- the full search or the quick search.
4 There is an exception and again that's where we started. And 5 I again reiterate that the border search doctrine is a special
6 needs or administrative exception to the traditional threshold
7 requirements requiring probable cause and reasonable 8 suspicion.

9 So I would like us now to come up with a reasonable 10 way that we could go forward in the case. I'm on the phone.
11 I don't need it needs to be with me on the phone but I don't 12 want it being put off to next week. Please, will you please 13 answer my question about who these people are that are listed?
14 If this is the complete list of all the communications that 15 they should not look at I need to hear that. Who is --

16 MR. KASSEM: Yes, Your Honor --

17 THE COURT: Who is Hugh Handicy [Ph.]?

18 MR. KASSEM: Your Honor, if I may, this is Ramzi
19 Kassem. Let me address your question before we sort of think 20 about the next steps. We're happy, by the way, to continue 21 the conversation with opposing counsel on this.

22 To answer your question, individuals that were 23 mentioned in the original email are all covered by the 24 attorney-client privilege. They were either members of the 25 legal team here at Main Street Legal Services representing Mr.

1 Janfeshan or they were separate counsel advising Mr. Janfeshan
2 from the American Civil Liberties Union.

3 THE COURT: So can you tell me who is who just so I
4 have it?

5 MR. KASSEM: Of course, Your Honor. So Mr. Handicy
6 who's listed is an attorney at the American Civil Liberties 7 Union.

8 THE COURT: Thank you.

9 MR. KASSEM: I'm trying to pull up --

10 THE COURT: Kelly Bernett? I'll go down the list.
11 Kelly Bernett is a student.

12 MR. KASSEM: So Kelly Bernett is a member of our 13 legal team here at Main Street Legal Services. She's covered 14 by the practice --

15 THE COURT: That's fine. I'm not contesting it.
16 Let's just go down the list. Deala Shamas, who is Deala 17 Shamas?

18 MR. KASSEM: I'll answer your question as fully as 19 possible, Your Honor.

20 THE COURT: Who is Deala Shamas?

21 MR. KASSEM: Mr. Shamas is an attorney who was 22 previously with Main Street Legal Services.

23 THE COURT: Who is Craig Small?

24 MR. KASSEM: Craig Small was also a member of our 25 law firm. He's also a student attorney.

1 THE COURT: So those are the names that are listed.

2 Mr. Schachner, I haven't asked a whole lot from you
3 but I would like there to be something in writing saying that 4 any of the communications between Mr. Janfeshan and any of 5 those listed people will not be opened.

6 MR. SCHACHNER: I'll have to get back to Your Honor 7 about that, about how we can do that. I appreciate Your 8 Honor's help with this. We -- just so the record is clear, we 9 had -- we had -- I had cleared my calendar for next Wednesday 10 morning. I had hoped we had gotten more additional 11 information particular the specific communications that 12 they're claiming to be privileged. That would certainly help.

13 THE COURT: Well, again, if I am telling you that 14 these are the communications that should not be searched, any 15 communication that have any of these people's name on it 16 should not be looked at, that should be enough.

17 MR. SCHACHNER: Okay. What I'll do is --

18 THE COURT: There can be a filter team set up as 19 there are on many other cases. Whether or not they agree to 20 it --

21 MR. SCHACHNER: Yes.

22 THE COURT: -- or they don't agree to it and that 23 any of these names should not be looked at.

24 MR. SCHACHNER: Okay. That is -- yes. CPB does 25 have a -- at least at JFK does have a procedure for a filter

1 team and we're prepared to utilize that procedure. In fact,
2 we've already -- in fact, that procedure has already started 3 and that's reflected in the email traffic that was attached to 4 Ms. Ahmad's declaration in the earlier case. CPB in 5 accordance with that procedure reached out and got some 6 information about the -- some information about the claim of 7 attorney-client privilege. I will -- we got some additional 8 information just now. I will of course convey that --

9 THE COURT: It's the same information as -- it's the 10 same information that was written in the letter to Ms. Kelly 11 by Ms. Ahmad. This information was the information they were 12 objecting to the filter team.

13 MR. SCHACHNER: Right.

14 THE COURT: But, again, I don't believe that they 15 have a basis to object to the filter team. They can sue after 16 the fact if they believe something was done impermissibly that 17 violates their client's rights.

18 MR. SCHACHNER: That's fine. So we're prepared to 19 start the search with the filter team and if Your Honor -- I 20 guess Your Honor's instructions that the filter team look at 21 communications involving these -- I guess it's seven 22 individuals listed in Ms. Ahmad's email of November 29, 2016, 23 2:16 p.m. I don't believe that's a problem. If it is -- my 24 only concern is for technical issues. I don't claim to be the 25 world's biggest technology expert but if that's Your Honor's

1 order I will convey that right away to CBP. If it becomes a 2 problem I will contact counsel and we can contact chambers.

3 THE COURT: Well, again --

4 MR. KASSEM: Your Honor --

5 THE COURT: -- I understand that plaintiffs are 6 still going to want to file papers but my ruling is that with 7 the exception of those names that have been provided and 8 again, it was an email from Ms. Ahmad to Ms. Kelly but mine is 9 marked 2:17 p.m., Tuesday, November 29, 2:17 p.m. It's copied
10 to Mr. Kassem and Mr. Ismail, Mr. Dunn, but it was sent from 11 Ms. Ahmad to Ms. Kelly and it's attached to the Document 10 on 12 16-CV-4324. It's Document 10-2, Page 20 at the bottom, Page 13 21 is the full email listing the names. We have just heard 14 the proffer from the plaintiffs as to who those people are and 15 I'm satisfied that their communications would be protected 16 based on the proffer given by Mr. Kassem and Mr. Ismail.
17 So the filter team should not open or look at those 18 communications.

19 MR. SCHACHNER: I'm sorry. The filter team
20 should -- the filter team should not open those 21 communications.

22 THE COURT: Should not open or review those 23 communications. They are protected by the attorney-client 24 privilege and this is to avoid further motion practice holding 25 up the Government's search. The Government has a basis to

1 conduct a search. I'm trying to balance the need to search
2 against the invasion which the search entails but I am not 3 going to continue on consent of the Government to hold the 4 Government off from doing the border search which again this 5 was -- this was November 20th that he arrived at JFK. The 6 Government had on its consent held off on the border search 7 until today.

8 I find that there is no further basis today since we 9 are at December 28th to hold the Government off but I do
10 caution the Government that there is an attorney-client 11 privilege being asserted as to these names and if the 12 Government wants to they are free to try to get a warrant but, 13 again, if they don't want to try to get a warrant to look at 14 anything on the phone that's their prerogative. It is a 15 border search which as I've said is an exception to the 16 traditional threshold requirements.

17 I will also say that if the plaintiff believes that 18 the defendants have violated the plaintiff's rights they can 19 bring any type of request for redress or whatever action they 20 believe is in their client's interest but I cannot based on 21 Mr. Janfeshan's objection to the search. I would like there 22 to be a protocol that the parties work out. I would like 23 there to be a protocol for when the phone might be returned.
24 So if you want to continue to discuss those things. But I am
25 not going to say that the Government must until the plaintiff

1 is satisfied with the protocol must withhold on any search
2 that it believes it's permitted to conduct because it was a 3 border search.

4 MR. SCHACHNER: That's fine, Your Honor. Just to 5 understand the protocol. We'd basically be utilizing the 6 standard operating procedure at JFK. The only thing -- the 7 only difference would be the filter team should not even open 8 or even look at the communications involving those seven 9 individuals on the page --

10 THE COURT: Correct.

11 MR. SCHACHNER: -- that you noted.

12 THE COURT: That's correct. I'll put -- I will put 13 that into writing today so that, Mr. Ismail and Mr. Kassem, 14 you can figure out what your position will be going forward.

15 But, again, since the prior application in the prior 16 case which is now closed, 16-CV-4324, was not an order of the 17 Court but on consent of the parties and because I understand 18 that this issue has great import for both sides but I do not 19 believe there is a basis for Mr. Janfeshan to preempt the 20 Government's ability to conduct a search at the border of his 21 electronic device, herein his telephone.

22 I am putting this on the record today. I am 23 encouraging the parties to discuss a way going forward that 24 the phone could be returned at a certain point in time that 25 would be agreeable, and I will also say, Mr. Schachner, that

1 the seven names that are listed in the email are names of 2 attorneys or students working under attorneys' supervision
3 that had involvement in Mr. Janfeshan's case if there are 4 communications on that cell phone between the attorney and 5 that -- and Mr. Janfeshan that the filter team should not open 6 those communications or review those communications, and that 7 if there's any need for it the Governmetn can make its 8 application to the Court.

9 MR. SCHACHNER: We'll do that, Your Honor. Again, 10 as I was saying before, I just want to confirm with CBP that 11 if as a technical matter that can be done.

12 THE COURT: Again, sir, I am telling you it can be 13 done and it should be done.

14 MR. SCHACHNER: Okay.

15 THE COURT: I oversee a lot of warrant applications.
16 There is great technical capability on the part of the 17 Government.

18 There was another issue in this case which nobody is 19 talking about and I don't really want to touch which is 20 whether or not Mr. Janfeshan will provide his pass code to the 21 phone and he was told to be in a communication from Ms. Kelly 22 that if they try to get into the phone and it destroys the 23 phone that they will not be liable under the Federal Tort 24 Claims Act Standards. So that notice has been given. I'm not 25 going to touch that issue.

1           Was there anything else, Mr. Ismail or Mr. Kassem,
2   that needs to be addressed on behalf of Mr. Janfeshan? And I
3   do understand that you've made the arguments for your client, 4   that you have not waived any of your arguments herein. Is 5   there anything else that needs to be addressed today?

6           MR. KASSEM: Your Honor, this is Ramzi Kassem. We 7   again appreciate your time and assistance with this. We will 8   look forward to your order. We remain available -- if there 9   are any snags and if it would be helpful to Mr. Schachner for 10   us to get on the phone with him we're still happy to do that 11   and we will obviously as you suggested, Your Honor, discuss 12   with Mr. Schachner the return of the device eventually and 13   also as you suggested, Your Honor, we will seek relief after 14   the fact as to the part of the search, the forensic part of 15   the search that believe is impermissible.

16           THE COURT: Very good. Anything further, Mr.
17   Schachner, before we adjourn?

18           MR. SCHACHNER: No, Your Honor.

19           THE COURT: Then I will order a copy of this 20   transcript to be made part of the record and I will put out a 21   short order which will just detail that the Government had 22   consented in the prior case to hold off in any border search 23   and that is now lifted with the proviso that the seven names
24   listed in the prior case, Ahmad, Bernett, Handisy, Ismail, 25   Kassem, Shamas and Small, that those are communications

1 between an attorney and a client and should be respected as 2 such and that the Government should not open those 3 communications or review them and that I'm directing Mr.
4 Schachner to tell his client that whether those communications 5 are via email, what's up, signal or text messaging, if it's 6 between Ahmad, Burnett, Handisy, Ismail, Kassem, Shamas, Small 7 and Mr. Janfeshan that the Government should not look at those 8 communications or open those communications.

9 With that, we are adjourned. Thank you.

10 MR. SCHACHNER: Thank you, Your Honor.
